What people appreciate about me...

- I'm skilled at getting my point across quickly and with clarity, even when messages or concepts are complex
- I set clear expectations and work collaboratively to reach goals
- I'm known for taking ownership and accountability, using sound judgement and a proactive, solution-focused approach in my decision making
- I am reliable and have the determination to get things done, often going the extra mile

What's important to me...

- Getting outside in the fresh air when it's proving to be a long and challenging day. Walking my dog in the countryside or looking after plants in the garden always provides a refreshing reset and change of perspective
- Being able to support the development of others. I've been fortunate to have a few valuable mentors professionally who have had a huge impact on building my confidence and helping me shape my career
- Having opportunities to push myself forward and put myself outside of my comfort zone when it's important for development
- I'm motivated by the work I do, I'm naturally quite curious and enjoy exploring new ideas and concepts. So as long as I'm trying new things and finding ways that I can add value I rarely lack motivation

How to support me well at work...

- I find it helpful to understand the bigger picture and the wider impact my work or decisions may have on the business and colleagues
- I value my autonomy and take a strong sense of ownership in my work, this doesn't mean I don't like collaboration however, I find contributing to working groups with colleagues and peers and putting our heads together is often the best way to generate creative solutions, share diverse perspectives, and achieve meaningful outcomes together
- When working with other colleagues I value clear communication and commitment to meeting deadlines
- I really recognise the value of having strong external relationships both within and outside of our sector. Opportunities to cultivate these further are key to me, as they support informed, forward-thinking decision-making
